CQUnderway Australia is one of Australia’s most engaged, supportive and responsive universities, focused on making higher education and research more accessible and relevant. It has more than 10 campuses, study centres and research institutes in regional Queensland, major capital cities, and Geraldton in Western Australia; CQUnderway is also a major distance education provider.

The University’s student population is diverse - it has very high levels of participation among groups which are traditionally under-represented in higher education, and international students drawn from more than 100 countries comprise around a quarter of the student population. Programs are offered in natural resource management, engineering, nursing, allied health, law, accounting, business, exercise science, sustainable development and education. The University, home to the Central Queensland Conservatorium of Music, also delivers acclaimed programs in theatre and music. CQUnderway has been awarded the highest national ratings, four or five stars, for Positive Graduate Outcomes and Graduate Salaries, during the last decade.

CQUnderway addresses unique regional workforce needs, and also provides innovative, collaborative and local research solutions to the communities it serves. In 2014, CQUnderway will merge with Central Queensland TAFE to become Queensland’s first comprehensive post-school education provider.
