Federation University Australia is both the nation’s newest university and the country’s third oldest tertiary education institution, spanning more than 140 years via its predecessor institutions. It is Australia’s only regional, multi-sector university and is a pivotal provider of post-secondary education for regional Victoria.

FedUni has campuses in Ballarat, in Gippsland in eastern Victoria, and the Wimmera in western Victoria (Horsham, Ararat and Stawell). The University has a reputation for relevance and excellence. It places great emphasis on the quality of its teaching and learning, offering affordable study options with small class sizes, friendly staff and accessible academic support. FedUni’s graduates consistently rate their study experience with five stars. FedUni is also recognised as a welcoming and friendly university for international students who are drawn from more than 40 countries.

FedUni has close links to industry and business and hosts a new Manufacturing Technology Training Centre, a new Industry Skills Centre and Australia’s largest regional technology park.
