The University of Southern Queensland (USQ) is a leading provider of on-campus and flexible learning programs within Australia and globally. USQ has campuses in Toowoomba, Fraser Coast and Springfield (Brisbane). With its close association with industries and communities, the University's programs are relevant and its graduates have the knowledge and skills to ensure they are work ready. Its educational offerings reflect the changing needs of society, from Arts, including Creative Arts, Business, Law and Education to Sciences, Engineering and Surveying.

The current student enrolment is approximately 28,000 of whom more than 20,000 study off-campus by distance learning. The University’s student population comprises 120 nationalities, making USQ the most multicultural university (per capita) in Australia.

USQ graduates are strongly sought after in the workplace, and independent surveys show they have a very high overall satisfaction rate with the standard of the courses and support offered to them. The University's graduate employment rate of 91 per cent is one of the highest in Australia.
